

Nature of the customer

Our customer is Mr. HOB RAVI SHANKAR SHARMA from Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). He is an extremely talented and respected officer in his department. He has been working in the department for past numerous years. His rich experience and love for his country made him rethink the kind of system we have for reporting the crime in our country.

He studied and analysed the data for more than last 10 years and noticed that there were more than 78% of the crime that go unreported in India. He immediately felt the need to change the prevailing system and thus contacted us to develop a prototype for him. He was very eager to change the current scenario and make this society a better place.

When we saw his desperation to make this society a better place we were driven by his idea and thinking too. He was very involved throughout the Software development Life Cycle and made sure that he was an active part of the team. He always was prompt enough to reply to our queries and answered them in the most elaborate fashion. He not only understood our schedules but also made sure that he gave enough room for our daily studies and activities. He was never over burdened us with work but in fact was very accommodating and understanding.

This project helped us develop new skills in our technical domain as well as our thinking process too. It was only because of the virtue of this project that we understood that it is not merely codes that make up a software but there are various other wings to that too. We also developed the most important skill of team management and project management which will of course prove to be a boon for us in the future.
